

UK-based FinTech Darwinex adds US equity strategies to its direct-indexing platform

Multimedia

In addition to execution in 800+ liquid US stocks, equity based strategies participate in Darwinex's seed capital allocation programme for up to €90M a year

Darwinex, the UK FCA regulated FinTech, completed another milestone in its product rollout plan. Stock traders can now choose from more than 800 US stocks, eligible to participate in Darwinex's seed allocation programme.

The eligible stock universe includes the 800 most liquid US stocks like Apple, Amazon, Google, Netflix and many others. Equity based Indexes are a long-requested feature on the platform, which already offers more than 3,000 FX and commodities strategies to investors.

Darwinex will seed equity based indexes - which it calls "DARWINs". The seed programme allocates up to €90 million notional a year to the most compelling indices, paying providers 15% performance. Indices will open up for 3rd party capital as a next step.

"Our vision is to be the online platform where traders monetize investor capital, at next to zero cost. Supporting US stocks is another milestone in supporting all major asset classes and broadens the investable talent pool. We'll pave the way for investors by seeding €90 million and open indices to retail and professional investors very soon". Darwinex co-founder and CEO, Juan Colón, said.

In addition to US Equities, Darwinex already on-boards futures based strategy providers. Providers accrue track-records in over 60 future contracts via Interactive Brokers' Trader Workstation (TWS). Futures based strategies will follow the equity path - enter the seed programme first and open to investor capital thereafter.

About Darwinex (Tradeslide Trading Tech Limited):

Darwinex is a FCA (UK) regulated FinTech company (FRN 586466). It owns a Broker and an Asset Management arm. Darwinex sources multi-asset strategies via its Brokerage unit and packages them for onward direct-indexing via its asset management arm. Strategy providers enjoy regulatory cover to monetize investor capital, whilst investors are protected by arm's length risk management.

Founded in 2012, Darwinex employs over 60 people across its London headquarters and develops proprietary technology in its Madrid (Spain) office. Darwinex remains founder-led, has recently received €3M funding, and grew revenue by 72% in 2020 posting operational profits.

Darwinex is arguably the fastest, and lowest cost online path for talent to legally attract and monetize investor capital, without compliance or administrative overhead.

For more information about Darwinex, please visit: www.darwinex.com
